San Elijo Lagoon CONSERVANCY

25 years of watershed moments

ANNUAL REPORT 2012

Welcome from Board of Directors President and Executive Director

In August 2012 we were once again fortunate to experience a significant event at San Elijo Lagoon: the release of seven endangered Light-footed Clapper Rails; birds that had been carefully raised by people to be reintroduced into their native salt marsh habitat.

With the release of several breeding pairs, the birds settled into the low marsh cord grass, joining 32 established Clapper Rails. It's a testament to the conservation of one of San Diego's largest remaining coastal wetlands that these birds will be monitored here, and successfully bred to ensure the continued rebound of this endangered species population.

This conservation event highlights a year of extraordinary accomplishments, in which the Conservancy entered its official 25 Years of Watershed Moments Anniversary with the acquisition of the Gateway property just days before the 2012 New Year.

The Campaign for Gateway Park secured a high-profile north county coastal property adjacent to the southern end of the Lagoon. For more than 20 years, one of our region's last stretches of unobstructed coastal views (3.44 acres) was subject to commercial development proposals until the Conservancy, through the generosity of lenders, acquired the property. By year's end, more than 700 community members and businesses contributed to save Gateway Park, providing a solid base of support for year two of the fundraising campaign.

Our environmental education program welcomed the title sponsorship of SDG&E in a new collaboration of North County cultural centers, called San Elijo to Escondido Watershed Collaboration. This partnership aims to increase awareness with Escondido elementary school children about their connection to watersheds through field and museum experiences.

In habitat restoration news, Lagoon Platoon received funding from Citizens Restoring Coastal Habitat to enhance native plant restoration with the cultivation of long-term steward volunteers. With funding provided by California Coastal Conservancy, a communications plan was researched and developed to guide outreach for San Elijo Lagoon Restoration as it moves through the Environmental Review process and public comment periods.

Now at a quarter century, our membership soars with more than 2,500 people, joined in exploration of the Reserve by more than 3,800 school children and weekend walk participants.

Not one of these programs is possible without the support of our donors. The accomplishments of this organization are a tribute to our members for their dedication to protecting and restoring the resources of San Elijo Lagoon Ecological Reserve.

As the Clapper Rails thrive to the ebb and flow of tides, we share confidence that special places, like San Elijo Lagoon, will remain protected for community and for nature.

Mission

The mission of San Elijo Lagoon Conservancy is to protect and restore the resources of San Elijo Lagoon Ecological Reserve, its watershed, and related ecosystems for the benefit of current and future generations.

As part of our mission, staff of the Conservancy:

- engage and educate the community about the value of the reserve to promote ecological literacy and environmental responsibility
- conduct scientific research to advance restoration planning and conservation science
- design and implement ecological management plans
- manage and acquire land and easements
- collaborate with the community, organizations, and government agencies.

Vision

San Elijo Lagoon Conservancy will be a guiding model for the stewardship of wetlands.

Core Values

San Elijo Lagoon Conservancy demonstrates an ongoing commitment to these core values:

- Environmental Stewardship
- Scientific Integrity
- Education
- Innovation
- Collaboration
- Ethical Leadership & Practices

Biological Management

Management actions maintain and enhance the 918-acre reserve

San Elijo Lagoon Ecological Reserve is one of San Diego's largest protected wetlands. Its history is intertwined with human progress and development, which makes protecting and enhancing the health of the watershed critically important. We manage the ecosystem in four key ways: keeping the inlet open to improve water quality in the lagoon; controlling invasive plants throughout the Reserve and conservation easements; acquiring habitat important for species survival; and planning for San Elijo Lagoon Restoration.

2012 Land Acquisitions

Just days before the New Year, the Conservancy acquired the Gateway property, the 3.44-acre coastal parcel at the southern end of the lagoon, east of Scenic Highway 101 between Cardiff-by-the-Sea and Solana Beach. The Campaign for Gateway Park was launched to permanently secure the property from threat of commercial development and to save its views and habitat values. Fundraising continues into 2013, with more than 700 community members who contributed by year-end.

In association with Carlsbad Watershed Network, Conservancy staff coordinates the control of invasive vegetation throughout the Carlsbad Hydrologic Unit (CHU), which encompasses all the land between Escondido Creek (San Elijo Lagoon) and Loma Alta Creek watersheds (Oceanside).

Conservancy biologists successfully wrote a proposal, funded by California Wildlife Conservation Board, for long-term funds to control invasive plants and restore multiple habitats throughout the CHU, and strengthen regional ecosystems and Carlsbad Watershed Network organizations that protect them. We initiated arundo removal on Buena Creek in partnership with the City of Vista; worked with County of San Diego (Escondido Creek) and City of Carlsbad (Buena Vista Creek) to control perennial pepperweed; and treated purple loosestrife and yellow-flag iris infestations along Escondido Creek.

Large stands of invasive eucalyptus and other non-native trees and shrubs were removed from the Conservancy's fee-title property, the Ford Wildlife Habitat Preserve, funded by Natural Resources Conservation Service. This 33-acre preserve (no public access) provides important habit for Great Horned Owls, coyotes, mule deer, and endangered birds, such as Least Bell's Vireo. These animals depend on native riparian vegetation to survive. The project removed invasive eucalyptus, acacia, and palms, and replaced them with willow, sycamore, and cottonwood.

Lagoon Platoon

In 2012, funding was secured for a three-year habitat restoration and long-term stewardship program to control invasive plants, called Citizens Restoring Coastal Habitat (CRCH). The outreach arm of CRCH is Lagoon Platoon; weekly and monthly community habitat restoration events. These events help to restore coastal strand habitat, improve coastal sage scrub habitat at Santa Carina Trail and Stonebridge Trail, protect sensitive salt marsh habitats in the central basin, and restore freshwater riparian woodland habitat along Escondido Creek.

Volunteers help clear invasive mustard along the Gateway property on Earth Day 2012.

Hundreds of volunteers, from professionals to high school and college ecology clubs, contributed 1,122 volunteer hours in 10 weekend events, and 314 hours in 44 Lagoon Platoon Steward trainings. In 2012 Vertex Pharmaceuticals and San Diego Downtown Rotary Club 33 each sponsored a private restoration activity. Citizens Restoring Coastal Habitat is funded by: Earth Island Institute, U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service Coastal Program, The Coastal Conservancy, California Wildlife Conservation Board, San Diego Chapter of California Native Plant Society, and Southern California Wetlands Recovery Project.

Coastal Dunes Restoration

Coastal sand dunes are rare, yet important habitats: avian, reptile, and plant species rely on these drastically reduced and still vanishing areas. Dune restoration enhances the biodiversity of the only existing coastal strand habitat, comprised of four acres, in the Reserve. In 2012 two Lagoon Platoon events removed trash and controlled invasive plants on the dunes including arrowweed, stinkwort, searocket, and iceplant.

SELC Internship Program

Five collegiate or post-graduate interns assisted Conservancy biologists in 2012 to perform vital monitoring and land conservation work, while receiving hands-on instruction and professional mentoring. Intern activities include GIS database management, map production, weekly water quality monitoring, monitoring of conservation properties and easements, and organization of the avian database in combination with historical 1970s data.

Scientific Monitoring

Watching indicators of ecosystem health and function.

San Elijo Lagoon Conservancy's scientific monitoring activities continued to expand in 2012, thanks to support from donors, and to our agencies and partners that rely on our data to understand and create the bigger picture of wetlands conservation, and environmental challenges considering the advance of climate change and associated sea level rise.

Cheers! Conservancy docents watch as seven endangered Clapper Rails, hatched in human care, were released in August 2012 at San Elijo Lagoon. Photo: Chris Mayne

In August 2012, seven endangered Light-footed Clapper Rails were released into their new homes at San Elijo Lagoon, joining an established colony of 32 breeding pairs.

The birds were hatched in human care at both San Diego Zoo Safari Park and Living Coast Discovery Center. These centers are part of Team Clapper Rail—a breeding and reintroduction partnership including SeaWorld San Diego, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, and California Department of Fish and Wildlife. The birds' release is a testament to the scientific monitoring and restoration activities that the Conservancy has overseen for more than 25 years.

San Elijo Lagoon Restoration

San Elijo Lagoon RESTORATION Reviving Your Wetlands

While the Reserve appears healthy, various factors keep it from being self-sustaining. San Elijo Lagoon Ecological Reserve is transitioning from open water and mud flat habitats to salt marsh and riparian habitat as a result of urban pressures. Highways, the railroad, and nearby infrastructure all contribute to restricted tidal flushing and degraded water quality in the reserve. We are currently in a planning phase called the Environmental Review Process, in which the public and participating agencies analyze various alternatives for restoring the lagoon. In 2012, a surf study was conducted at Cardiff State Beach, the lagoon's connection to the ocean, in partnership with Surfrider Foundation. Data about the types of waves and water activities in this area were implemented into planning. A shoreline morphology study was also conducted that analyzes how the sand and sediment removed from the lagoon during restoration could benefit beach sand replenishment. Planning continues, with anticipation of releasing the EIR/EIS by mid-2013 for public comment.

Inlet circulation monitoring

To maintain a functional lagoon opening that supports healthy tidal circulation, technical staff continues its weekly monitoring of dissolved oxygen, temperature, and salinity at six stations throughout the Reserve. The Conservancy secured funding from San Diego County Vector Control Program to keep the inlet open with annual mechanical breaching through 2015 (in spring, followed by the last major winter storm).

Water quality monitoring

SELC technical staff continues to manage a network of water quality monitoring stations in the Carlsbad Hydrologic Unit (CHU), providing stream flow and precipitation information at the Camino del Norte bridge in Rancho Santa Fe, and in the East Basin of the lagoon at the southern end of the freshwater dike. Since 2004, municipalities, universities, regional science and regulatory organizations and water districts have benefited from these datasets.

Scientific Monitoring continued

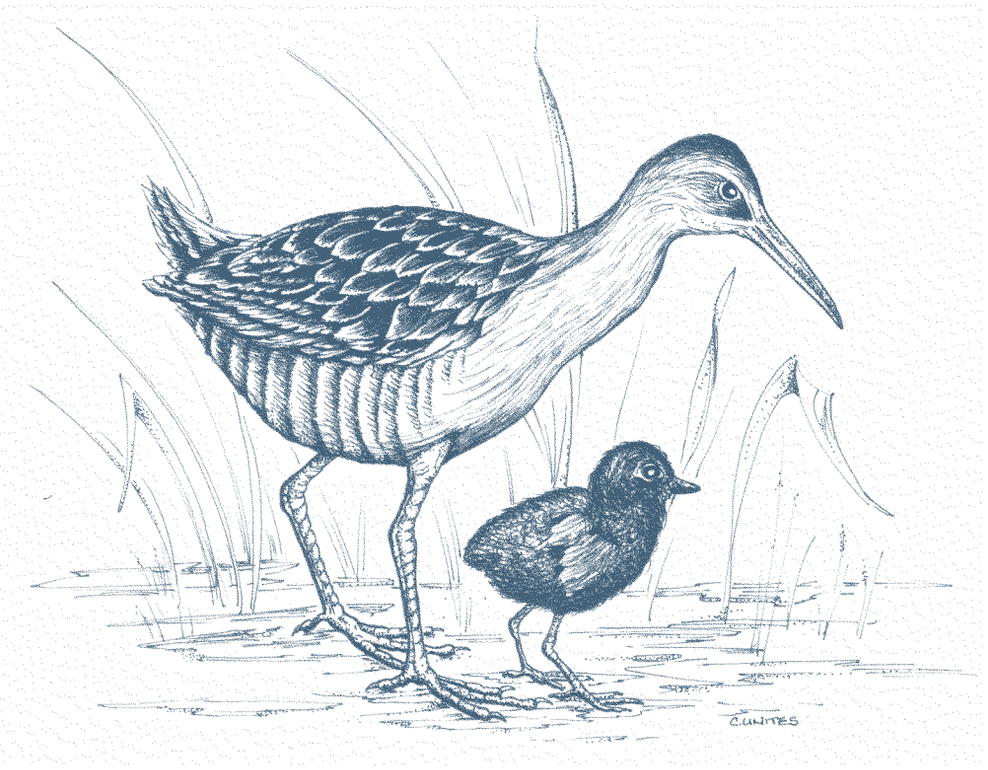
Funding restraints have curtailed the monitoring of all stations in the CHU, but the Conservancy maintains those two on Escondido Creek. Reserve management established a policy to cease dike closures in winter, a practice that carried over from pre-Reserve hunting era.

Monitoring Land Stewardship Properties

SELC manages six conservation easements adjacent to San Elijo Lagoon Ecological Reserve and four fee-title properties within and adjacent to the Reserve. The acquisition of the Gateway property in 2012 expanded our fee-title properties by 3.44 acres. Each of these properties protects important habitat. An Intern in summer monitors each site for vegetation thinning and modifications, litter and unauthorized trails, invasive species infestations, and water diversions.

Monthly Bird Counts

We are indebted to the core volunteers who conduct the monthly San Elijo Lagoon Bird Count. Each month, they conduct bird surveys, which adds to datasets from 2003. Data are submitted to Point Reyes Bird Observatory (PRBO) and eBird.org. Data sharing informs large-scale conservation and policy decision-making.



Environmental Education

Inspiring stewardship for nature in our "wildlife classroom"

Recognized as a trusted messenger for environmental education, San Elijo Lagoon Conservancy's education programs increased in 2012. More than 3,800 people—school children and the public—joined us for naturalist-guided walks in the Reserve.

Support from our members, Birds of a Feather Gala biennial gala, and educational grants from our corporate and government partners (see next page) enable the Conservancy to provide educational opportunities to all ages throghout the community and watershed. Some of the year's highlights include:

Elementary School Programs

The kindergarten through fifth grade program continues to be our largest program in the education department representing 60% of docent-led walks. More than half of the students came from underserved communities, such as Escondido and Vista. In 2012 we created a new program focused on watersheds designed for fifth grade. Students learn about the distribution of Earth's fresh and salt water, and how valuable fresh water is to all communities. This program complements the Water and Wetlands Teachers Guide developed in early 2012. We also began researching and developing a K-2 Teachers Guide for publication in early 2013.

Public Programs

Family Discovery Days

In our second year of collaboration, County Rangers and the Conservancy presented free nature-themed events, crafts, and live guest performances at quarterly Family Discovery Days at San Elijo Lagoon Nature Center. Wings Over Wetlands in January celebrates winter bird migration. Spring EGG-ucation highlights emerging life timed with spring's arrival. Native San Elijo Lagoon in summer reveals unique native plants, animals, and Native American influence in the wetland. Before Halloween, Not-so-Scary Estuary hosts children in costume for nature-themed scavenger hunts, and not-so-creepy animal encounters. Conservancy staff design stations and provide volunteer coordination. Family Discovery Days hosts an average of 750 people each season.

Wildlife Walks

Board members and docents, Elizabeth Venrick and Linda Jones, worked with the education director to test pilot naturalist-led walks in the evenings. The popular Summer Evening Walks series occurred on third Wednesdays from June through September on Rios Avenue Trail and were attended by an average of 30 people each walk. Plans were finalized for introducing new Wildlife Walks in 2013 that will feature four distinct regions of the reserve by rotating trails each season. Weekly Saturday walks led by Conservancy docents continue at the Nature Center.

Docent-Naturalist Carol Rayes shares the wonders of wetlands with elementary school children from Escondido; a neighboring community east of the Reserve.

Program Partners

Escondido to San Elijo Watershed Collaboration

The Conservancy is piloting a three-year partnership, launched in 2012, with San Diego Zoo Global, The Escondido Creek Conservancy, Olivenhain Municipal Water District, and San Diego Children's Discovery Museum. The collaboration aims to connect Escondido's third through fifth graders with nature in their backyard, through all-school assemblies, field and museum visits, and an annual family event. With Escondido Creek watershed as an outdoor classroom, this project will foster the next generation of environmental stewards. We recognize and thank SDG&E for funding the launch of this collaboration.

CSU San Marcos

An environmental education pilot program is coordinated by a professor at California State University San Marcos. Through collaboration, this partnership seeks to link classroom teachers (K–12), their students and families, with community science resources to build awareness of the science and stewardship of natural resources.

High School Ecology Clubs

As we create new programs for the high school level, we welcomed San Dieguito High School Ecology Club in Fall 2012. Students participated in monthly-led docent walks, followed by a County Ranger-led habitat restoration event. Students also designed and staffed exhibits for Family Discovery Days.

Docent-Naturalists

Ten new docents joined the volunteer Docent-Naturalist Program in 2012, bringing our core of naturalists to 36 talented individuals. Together, they represent a diverse variety of professional backgrounds. Docent training was enhanced from seven to 10 sessions to include more field time and training. Docents are encouraged to lead at least 12 walks throughout the year, but six dedicated docents each led between 30–40 walks to help with the increase in programs.

SELC Internship Program

Program support was provided by two Education Interns who helped with administrative tasks, school field trips, Family Discovery Days, and creation of educational materials and props.

2012 Docent-Naturalist graduates and current Docents gathered for an end-of-year celebration and welcome party for the new class.

25th Anniversary Communications and Outreach

Increasing community awareness of and inspiring support for the work of San Elijo Lagoon Conservancy during its 25th milestone year

With the acquisition of the Gateway property, the Conservancy secured an increase in media coverage in all program areas, raising the profile of the 25-year nonprofit land trust with sustained community buzz.

San Elijo Lagoon Conservancy in the News

The 2012 press room (SanElijo.org/pressroom) features dozens of articles and television highlights about Conservancy activities. The thread to these news events weaves together the inspiring profiles of volunteers, wildlife releases, the extrication of an obsolete dumping ground, inlet breaching, public walks, Family Discovery Days, community habitat restoration, viable aquifer exploration, and The Campaign for Gateway Park.

June 19, 2012 was proclaimed "Denise Stillinger Day" in San Diego County by Supervisor Pam Slater-Price for Stillinger's 30-year efforts toward conservation of natural resources and environmental education. This proclamation followed the Spring announcement of Stillinger's E.A.R.T.H. Award (Environmental Action & Restoration That Helps) at San Diego EarthWorks annual recognition of regional conservation leaders.

Social Media

Consistent online communications with members and self-subscribed friends took the form of monthly Lagoon eNews, reaching more than 2,400 subscribers. Our premier social media site, Facebook.com/SanElijo, grew by 35% in friends over last year.

We launched an online Animal Guide (SanElijo.org/animalguide) for trail visitors to learn about wildlife or verify sightings at San Elijo Lagoon. Seventy animals that represent species in all areas of the Reserve are profiled with donated professional photography and "fun facts" about each animal's adaptations and behaviors.

The Conservancy's web site encourages online donations and strengthens awareness of the Reserve's treasures and Conservancy programs, viewed by an average of 3,500 unique visitors a month.

Toward the end of our momentous 25th year, we began the process of rebranding to represent the next era in wetlands conservation. Through research and an online poll taken by 200 participants, the new tagline: Connecting communities. Protecting nature. was selected to phase in for 2013.

Board members served as Conservancy Ambassadors at quarterly SELC/County Parks Family Discovery Days, and in the community at Fiesta del Sol in Solana Beach June 1–2, Arts Alive at Gateway Park (with City of Solana Beach) October 6, and Cardiff Green Beach Fair October 27.

Development and Membership

The Official Celebration of 25 Years of Watershed Moments

The Conservancy's significant milestone—25 years—was aligned with the organization's greatest opportunity yet: The Campaign for Gateway Park.

San Elijo Lagoon Conservancy obtained a loan to purchase the Gateway property on December 27, 2011, securing a coastal parcel of 3.44-acres against decades of commercial development proposals and story poles. Within months, staff and committee developed core messages and outreach materials, launching the fundraising campaign to permanently acquire the property.

With the Gateway property secure, but not yet saved, the Conservancy held a Lagoon Platoon community restoration event on Earth Day at the site to remove the invasive Garland daisy. In Fall, we participated in Solana Beach Arts Alive, featuring the work and donated proceeds of 10 local artists. By year-end, the Campaign generated $1,195,000 in gifts and pledges from 781 donors.

President's Council

The mission of the President's Council is to provide support necessary for the Conservancy to maintain a continued existence with the help of endowment income. The year 2012 ushered the largest growth in new President's Council members, thanks to the outreach efforts of its chairperson, Daniel Powell. We welcomed: Chris and Julie Cabou, Janie DeCelles, James Dietz, Pollie Gautsch & Darryl Matsui, Joe & Mary Kellejian, Gary Martin & Nancy Brown, and Fred & Jean Sebold.

Legacy Circle

Our Legacy Circle donors are individuals who have generously included the Conservancy in their estate plans; 24 special gifts that will help support conservation in perpetuity. Patty Cornelius joined the Conservancy's Legacy Circle in 2012. President's Council and Legacy Circle donors are treated to a private Spring Wildflower Walk and Fall Bird Walk followed by a picnic reception in the Reserve.

Major Donor Reception

With the launch of The Campaign for Gateway Park, the Conservancy increased its support base of major donors and general membership by 25% in 2012. In October, members Julie and Chris Cabou hosted the Major Donor Reception at their home overlooking Gateway Park. Major donors were entertained by a live harpist and a 25th Anniversary commemorative video.
